DAILY EVENING BULLETIN.
DAILY, EXCEPT SUNDAY.
ROSSER & McCARTHY, Proprietors.
MONDAY EVE., MARCH 4, 1889.

It's a wet and hungry crowd at Washington City to-day.

It is now President Harrison, and ex-President Cleveland.

"STANDTILLISM" is a new word. The originator must have been thinking of some Maysville people when he got it up.

CHRISTIAN COUNTY has gone largely against prohibition. Hopkinsville, the county seat, gave 650 majority for the wets.

HON. C. J. BRONSON, of Lexington, is spoken of as a Democratic candidate for Attorney General, to succeed General P. Wat Hardin.

CONGRESSMAN KENNEDY, of Ohio, will keep on abusing the "Southern Brigadiers" until he will meet the fate of Senator Chandler.

THE inauguration of Harrison has proved a bonanza for Washington. It is estimated the visitors will leave about $1,000,000 in that city.

JUDGE DENNY, of Lexington, is with the hungry delegation at Washington City. He is after the office of District Attorney for Kentucky.

THE scramble for the spoils commences in earnest to-day. As the Washington correspondent of the Louisville Times remarks, "there's a high old time ahead."

THE Republicans, it will be observed, have never elected a President who was not an Ohio man.—Commercial Gazette.

Who elected Lincoln? "Uncle Abe" was a Kentuckian, if history is correct.

EVERYBODY admits that a shoe factory here would prove a profitable enterprise, but no one seems willing to take the lead in starting it. Are we afflicted with "standtillism"?

WITHIN a week two Louisville medical colleges have turned loose upon suffering humanity 232 young saw-bones. As a means of disposing of the surplus population, this beats any process that Malthus ever conceived.—Louisville Times.

ALL the Kentucky delegation in Congress, except Carlisle and Breckinridge, will vote for free tobacco if they get a chance. But strip the Kentucky delegation of Carlisle and Breckinridge, and what is there left but stems and rags isn't?—Louisville Times.

Well, there are several rank suckers in the lot.

JUDGE FLANAGAN, of Winchester, succeeded in getting a claim for $8,000 allowed by Congress a few days since, and a Washington City attorney who assisted him in the case wanted $4,000 of it for his fee. The W. C. a. was given $900 by the arbitrators who were called in to settle the dispute that naturally followed the exorbitant demand. Washington City lawyers are a modest set of creatures.

NO DOUBT Colonel Dudley wishes now that he had never used the New York World, the New York Post and one or two other papers for charging him with the authorship of that "blocks-of-five" circular during the last campaign. They at last succeeded in forcing him on the witness stand but he defiantly refused to answer the question propounded to him, referring to the famous letter. He wrote that circular and he knew his answers would counter him of the infamous business. It remains to be seen how the Harrison administration will reward him.

THE honest thinking, fair-minded people throughout the land will commend Cleveland for vetoing the Direct Tax Refunding bill. In his veto message sent to the Senate, Saturday, he said:

"It is my belief that this appropriation of the public funds is not within the constitutional power of Congress. Under the limited and delegated authority conferred by the constitution upon the general Government the statement of the purposes for which money may be lawfully raised by taxation in any form declares also the limit of the objects for which it may be expended. All must agree that the direct tax was lawfully and constitutionally laid, and that it was rightfully and correctly collected. It can not be claimed, therefore, nor is it pretended, that any debt arose against the Government and in favor of any State or individual by the exaction of this tax. Surely, then, the appropriation directed by this bill cannot be justified as a payment of a debt of the United States."

The bill would have taken about $17,000,000 out of the National treasury, and the people will agree with Mr. Cleveland that the surplus can be put to much better use.

"BROOMED HIM OUT."

Mr. Hawthorne Hill's Efforts to Learn How One of New York's Leading Mediums Lives.

A Delicate Mission and the Manner in Which It Petered Out.

[New York Mercury.]

Fake journalism reached its level in this city a week or so ago, when a man connected with the New York World canvassed the grocery stores, butchers' shops, cobblers' basements, tradesmen's places, umbrella menders' dusty and grimy quarters, etc., and interviewed the servants in the sculleries and the keepers of stands on the street corners, and all this to discover something on which to base a newspaper attack on two women! One of the ladies against whom the paper was directing its forces of attack through the sewers and basements of the neighborhood was Mrs. M. E. Williams, of West Forty-sixth street, a prominent leader in Spiritualistic science, and the other was a well-known authoress and wealthy lady. During the week there were whispers going around in Spiritualistic circles that the World was "about to jump on Mrs. Williams," and "would have a big dose for her on Sunday." However this rumor got out or originated, it was certainly spread with great industry.

About the middle of the week, while Mrs. Williams' servant girl was in the grocery store where Mrs. Williams deals, one of the clerks asked her if anything was up. The servant did not know of anything and asked the young man what he meant. He said that a tall man of good appearance, about thirty-five years of age, with a blonde mustache, had been around the neighborhood for several days making inquiries about Mrs. Williams. He had been there and wanted to know what sort of a woman Mrs. Williams was, how she behaved herself, if she paid her bills, or best everybody who would trust her—what quality of provisions she purchased and how much on an average her grocery bills amounted to in a week? did she run a book or did the grocery man insist on cash payment for the articles as bought? what did the grocery people think of her on general principles and what was her general reputation in the neighborhood?

In most of the cases he was told that Mrs. Williams resided at No. 25 West Forty-second street, and he had better go there and put his questions to the lady herself. On Thursday he got as far as Mrs. Williams' own residence. The front basement is rented to some gentlemen who keep a dramatic school. He read the sign and then began to put questions as to the sort and what it did for young ladies ambitious for histrionic fame. He confidentially informed the manager that he had a very talented sister—a dear, sweet girl—who had great ambition in the dramatic line. The manager handed him a circular explaining what the school would do and the tuition fee. He would think the matter over and let them know. And then, by the bye, did not Mrs. Williams, the famous medium, reside up stairs? Yes! And then he applied his pumping apparatus to the dramatic manager re Mrs. Williams' guests, sessions, manner of life and so on. Next day, Friday, he ventured up the steps and rang the bell of Mrs. Williams' hall door. To the servant who opened the door he presented a card with the name engraved:

MR. HAWTHORNE HILL.

He said he wished to see Mrs. Williams if she were at home and accessible. The servant showed him into the parlor, and Mrs. Williams came down stairs in a few minutes. He had colored himself as a gentleman much interested in the investigation of spiritual phenomena, and, in fact, in all kinds of occult sciences. He talked very intelligently and gave evidence of having read some of the recent literary on these matters. "And now," said he finally, "I fear I will have to be rude." "Very well," she replied, "if you can afford to be rude in the presence of a lady you can be so." Mr. Hill said he represented the New York World and had been assigned to work up an article about her. The Sun had got a "beat" in the Stryker-Carroll case, and the World wanted to get square by getting a "beat" on her. He said some letters had been received at his office stating that Mrs. Williams was the queen of the mediums, and an exposure of her would make a tremendous sensation. "Well," said Mrs. Williams, "how much of an exposure are you going to give? Won't dreadful things be printed on a Sunday? your scouring around the tradesmen's shops and kitchens of my neighbors?" I suppose you have found that I am very much like other people, that I eat and drink and live very well, and pay my bills and treat everybody right—did you not? And is not that more than you or the New York World can say? I mind my own business and leave my neighbors alone, and that too is more than you or the New York World do." Mr. Hill tried to excuse his own conduct by saying the World was very much down on Sacrilege, and was just acting for an exposure. He had been sent to do this work and he had to obey orders. "Well," remarked Mrs. Williams, "I order you now to return to the World office and tell your superiors, who order be garbage men to give you such instructions, that there is not one portion in my life that I care about if known to every soul on earth, save those very compliments for kind and honorable attention they have bestowed upon me through so distinguished a gentleman as yourself."

Finally, as if in a wood spirit of resentment, Mr. Hill observed: "I learned that you pay your rent by giving private seances to the lady who owns the house." "Even if I did," Mrs. Williams replied, "it would be much more respectable and honorable than the way the New York World pays its rent, if I am to judge of its methods of business by your lofty mission. But is that all you could find out? Pray before I extend you my pity, for your only piece of information happens to be a falsehood out of whole cloth. As I happen to own this house, I have no rent to pay, so your great charge falls to the ground."

Mr. Hawthorne Hill did not wait for any more. That afternoon a woman who keeps a newspaper and periodical stand on Broadway called on one of her customers—a lady who is a friend of Mrs. Williams and told her that a man was going around making all sorts of inquiries about her. He had asked her such questions about the lady that she had driven him out of her little store with a broom. She had, in her own expressive language "broomed him out." The inquisitive visitor answered the description of the reporter, and about an hour or so later he appeared at the lady's house and gave his card! The lady took the card and drove down town to the World office and made things very lively in that place for some time. She demanded to know by what authority and on what grounds detectives and reporters had been employed by the World to go around trying to collect gossip about her. She believed there must be a law against such disgraceful espionage of a private citizen and declared she would immediately call upon her lawyers regarding the matter. And so the rumored "expose" did not blossom into print last Sunday, and there are a lot of petty-minded and envious Spiritualists very much disappointed.

Standard Time.

Dayton, O., has adopted standard time. There are some good reasons why Maysville should adopt standard time.

If there are no good reasons why this should not be done, we should like to learn them.

One good reason is, that it would produce uniformity. The railroads will never go back to the old method. So we must adopt railroad or standard time, or have two and different notations of the time.

The City Council could effect the change by having the town clock regulated by railroad time. J. R.

A Call on Dr. H. K. Adamson.

THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Notes and Comments by Superintendent Galbraith for 1888-89.

NO. 24—HELENA.

There are 51 pupils on roll, with an average attendance of 34. Jno. Flarity, Ritchie Brough, Mitchell Darnall, Willie Hall, Maude Hall, Jessie May Wells and Gertrude Staton have lost no time.

The trustees, Dr. Samuel Brough, Jno. R. King and Eugene R. Davis, have been very attentive on the school, and have furnished the house with first-class patent seats.

This school is taught by Miss Mary Tomb, an experienced and successful teacher, who brings to her work not only the qualification of education, but that tact and skill in the adoption of methods of instruction and school management, which makes the exercises of the school-room pleasant, interesting and profitable to the pupils. We here found the written work in use not as a drudgery, but a pleasure. The pupils took pride and pleasure in their work. As a consequence, we saw rapid progress, and found the pupils studying the subject rather than the recitation. The whole school presented such rational and lively interest as makes us linger with pleasure in our recollection of each class; for we found that kind of work which tells with best results on the lives of the pupils.

This school has a roll of honor, which is eligible only to those who have an average grade of 75 on the monthly report. The monthly report is sent out, and has not lagged in interest.

The success of the public school is emphasized with a private session of unabated attendance, the very best indorsement possible.
